Powerful Strategies for Electric Cooperatives

Rising costs, unwanted rate fluctuations, the need to diversify with renewable energy and reduce carbon emissions are common issues for electric cooperatives.

Solential can help you implement proactive, renewable energy and battery storage strategies that increase capacity savings, control energy costs, engage members and achieve sustainability goals.

"Our 35,000 residential and commercial members are experiencing the stress of rising energy prices. Many have expressed interest in renewable energy. While our power supplier continues to increase their renewable portfolio, we are proud to take on an independent community solar initiative with Solential. Adding a renewable resource to our system at a cost comparable to our wholesale power supplier supports our priorities to keep energy affordable and sustainable."

HENDRICKS POWER: PUTTING THEIR ENERGY STRATEGY TO WORK

Electric cooperative Hendricks Power recently broke ground on a 7 MW AC solar project with partner Solential Energy. 19,225 solar PV panels will be installed on 60 acres leased from a local farming family. The array will be commissioned and generating power for the co-op's 35,000 customers by mid 2023. Solential was responsible for site selection, securing a solar investor, assistance in negotiating a power purchasing agreement, and developing the solar array. This proactive project helps achieve long-term rate stability with renewable energy.

In 2017-2019, Solential partnered with Wabash Valley Power Alliance in developing six community solar projects totaling 6.5 MW in Illinois, Indiana and Missouri, bringing rate stable, renewable energy to rural communities.
